Much has been printed about Emory girls in the past few issues of the White Topper. Not much of this has been very complimentary. I insist that there is much to be said for the Emory Girl!

Maybe you don't have classes with the girls from Bristol; but they are simply girls like (Continued at bottom of page)

With the advent of basketball season, football will be shoved far into the background. Before putting the game into a cubbyhole for another year, let's take a look back at the season just ended.

Sept. 17 -- The Wasps opened the season with a bang, conquering Concord in Bluefield 21-7. Emory was held scoreless for three periods, but a long dash by Coky Kitts broke the game wide open in the final stanza and Bill Stevenson contributed the clinching tally on another run.

Sept. 24 -- A heavier Tennessee Wesleyan team was thoroughly outmanned as the Wasps ran up a 32-0 count over their Methodist brethren. After the home team had pulled into a substantial lead, every player on the squad saw action.

Oct. 1 -- Underdog Hampden-Sydney brought the Emory Express to a grinding halt with an upset 8-0 defeat of the Wasps at Bristol. The Emory team had a couple of scoring opportunities but could not move the ball when they had to. Jim Smith, star quarterback of the Tigers, scampered 32 yards for the lone TD. Late in the game, the Wasps gave up a safety.

Oct. 8 -- Bouncing back from the demoralizing Hampden-Sydney contest, the Wasps rolled over arch-rival Carson-Newman by a margin of 25-7. Playing their best game of the season, the locals kept their string of ten straight non-losing games with the Baptists running. No "luck" Here!

Oct. 15 -- Having just held ETSC to a 28-18 score after outplaying the Buccaneers, Maryville was massacred by the surging Emory and Henry team. The Wasps showed tremendous offensive strength in running up a 44-0 score over the ragged Scottie eleven.

Oct. 22 -- A black day for the Emory football fortunes; The Wasps suffered their second defeat of the year at the hands of a massive Appy State eleven in Boone, N.C. The final score was 26 to 0.

INTRAMURAL

A valiant little Waspette team gave King College a good battle Thursday night, leading them until the final quarter. The Emory girls played their best game of the season. The forwards worked together consistently and played very smart ball.

The score by quarters was 19-9, 27-21, and 36-35 in favor of Emory, with King pulling ahead 50-46 in the final quarter.

Martha Rollins did a very efficient job of guarding Nancy Greenhoe. Greenhoe, incidentally, handles the ball beautifully, moving very much like a boy.

Intramural basketball season winds up its schedule this week, and the fraternities are looking forward to the beginning of softball. At the present, the Sigs and the Phi Gams are tied for the lead with seven wins and one loss each. The winner of the basketball crown will be determined by who wins in the number two league. In this group, Waldorfs, Sigs, and Phi Gams are battling it out for the championship.

Leading scorers for the first round were George Klippa with 63 points, "Cotton" Stanley with 61 points, Ken Stickey with 54 points, Buddy Dixon with 46 points, and Irvin Cubine with 44 points.

"B.C." Goes to College

There's a caveman at large in the comic pages of many newspapers named "B.C." The caveman is named "B.C.", not the newspapers. He has an I.Q. of 47, putting him in the freshman norm, and an aptitude for teaching, according to tests in the Registrar's Office.

Antedating Homer by some few years, B.C. is in a position to give vital first-hand information on the eolithic beginnings of civilization, culture and all that jazz, hitherto a blank page in history.

"B.C." is the creation of one Johnny Hart who never went to college and, consequently, is an unbiased expert. The comic strip, now two years old, is featured in over 100 newspapers through the agency of the New York Herald Tribune Syndicate.

B.C.'s way-out humor and stereo sound effects, e.g., "Gronk!" and "Zot!" have made him the latest rage among us high-type collegiates. The first "B.C." book is being published by Funk & Wagnalls on April 1, an April Fool's joke with no butts, everybody being in on it. It's called "Hey, B.C.!"

One mystery remains: what to the initials stand for? A chap in the office claims the full name is Bobo Catepetl, but who knows?

flocked back to the college for Homecoming celebrations, the main part of which was the football game with Lenoir-Rhyne, one of the powers of the North State Conference. The Wasps forged to a 9-0 lead in the first period but it was too good to last. The undefeated Bears roared back behind the brilliant running of sophomore fullback Hal Bullard and had gained by halftime. A touchdown in the last quarter clinched the victory for the visitors, 20-9, despite a fine performance by lighter Emory squad. Halfback Kitts was lost for the season in the second period with a knee injury.

Nov. 5 -- Despite the loss of their top runner, the Wasps smacked Western Carolina, 40-7. In a night game in Cullowee, N. C., the Wasps rolled on the ground to a decisive win in a game that was figured to be close.

Nov. 12 -- Visiting West Virginia Tech played the Wasps to a tie on Fullerton Field 7-7. Both teams missed opportunities to pull the game out. Sonny Holmes celebrated his return to action with a brilliant dash to pay dirt.

Nov. 19 -- The Wasps ended the season in a blaze of glory with a decisive victory over Randolph-Macon in Ashland. Ray Chapman, performing in his own locale played a very good game as did Sonny Holmes, also from that area.

The Wasps do not lose much in numbers, but the graduating players will be sorely missed. Irvin Cubine, Tom Yarbrough, Preston Pitta, Harold Dings, Tom Rasnick and Jack Sykes have played their last game in Blue and Gold. There will be a gaping hole at tackle, but it has been there before and has been filled capably, so there will not be much worry.

There will be a spot open at right end, too, and some very valuable second-stringers will be missing, but "though much is taken, much abides" in the Wasp camp. With a promising group of freshmen moving up, and only six lost to the sheepskin, it looks like the Wasp fans will be treated to many pleasant afternoons next fall.

This studying together is certainly an advantage not to be overlooked, but does a girl want to help a boy who runs to Bristol every weekend to see a Sullins girl?

Another advantage which is very important to a college boy is that of finances. If you date an Emory girl, she will most likely be content to spend a few of those Saturdays on campus and thus, save you the expense of a trip to Bristol. Even should she want to go to a movie, Abingdon is much closer than Bristol. If you date one of the girls from Bristol, this requires a trip to Bristol each weekend if you do not want to be "shot out of the saddle."

The Emory girl is not "out to get her man" any more than other females. Most girls come to college to get an education. I can't see that anyone would come to Emory to get a man-- with all the rules that an Emory girl must keep, this sounds a little ridiculous. Not too many are interested in getting very much involved with a boy who is still in school. There are much better catches, financially speaking, elsewhere.

If a boy wants to date, he should see some of those boys ask their opinion of the matter. I'm sure you will be told of many more advantages than I have listed. I could list others, but I'm sure that if a person stops to think he will realize what they are.

Emory girls are not any different! Look around and you will see that they are just like the average female, and if you are trying to find fault with all you old bachelors who will never know what it means to come home to a nice home-cooked meal and all the luxuries of having a loving wife to wait on you!
